Jenna is a Bay Area born and raised Chinese American architectural designer with a passion for straw and clay as building materials. She's been designing and permitting straw bale houses and buildings mostly in California, but also in Oregon, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. She worked with Skillful Means, BOA Constructor Design Build, ADU Collective and collaborated with others designing fire rebuilds, additional dwelling units, tiny homes, homesteads, and studios. She was also the California Straw Building Associations workshop coordinator and currently sits on the CASBA board of directors. She's now building her own panelized straw bale house in Providence, Rhode Island and works under the business name Jenna Yu Designs.
